They were brought up at the that some of the branches had been newly cut. The story of the defendants was that they were old branches which had been on by other people, They merely happened to be passing along the road, and, seeing the branches lying about, they picked them up. They did not think they were doing harm. The prisoners were each sentenced to andergo fourtoen days' imprisonment.

At the Mugistracy to-day, a respect able looking Chinaman and a sailor from H. M. S. Emigation were charged, before Mr Komp, with disorderly conduct at Bonham Strand on Subday night. It ap peared that the Chinaman had an office in the building, and, as the place was on fire, he was naturally anxious to rescue some his goods and chattels. He broke through the line of Indian constables who were keeping the crowd back, and one of them, not knowing that 'John' had an interest in the place, pulled him back. The business of the Yokohama Electric Railway is progressing. Since the company received the official permission to construct the railway, it has successfully overcome the antagonism of the jinrikishaman. Now the directors of the company are making every preparation for the construction of the railway-these preparations being planned in the office of the compliny at Gochome, Oneye-cho. The company has re-gistered capital amounting to a million yen, but is planning to defray all the expenses of buying the grounds and constructing the railway with half the sum, so that in the first instalment of the capital only 12.50 yen or a quarter of the face value of each share fill be called up. Though the day for beginning the construction work is not yet fixed, the work of construction will be commenced on the section between Yokohama and Kanagawa. But of course where over 2,000,00 ignorant people are concorned some will disobey and thus renew the infection. One Hundred Lives Lost, (From Our Own Correspondent)

CANTON, December 12. On Monday afternoon, an accident of a ery serious nature happened to the Sam Chan passage-boat on its way to Canton. Owing to an oldinary boat on the same route being off the run because of repairs, there were considerably more than a hundred extra passengers, bringing up the total to nearly five hundred. There was also a soul retiring inside at sundown and staying large quantity of cargo as usual piled on the upper deck, making the yessel topheavy. The passage bont was towed by a stoam lameli. All went well till a place called Yang Ki was reached. There the river takes a rapid turn, and to add to the danger some rocks obstruct the passage, It appears that just when this point was reached the rudder of the passage-boat gave way, and sho was dashed on the ocks. If the passengers had not made a rush no lives need have been lost, but immediately the vessel struck all was confusion. In a few minutes the pressy -boat £20,000 yearly), giving it as a present if the sank. Most of the passengers were on the deck, and these were saved by adjacent boats. The people inside, including the women, had no chance of escape. The water rushed in and drowned them all. Only one woman escaped. In all, over one hundred people have lost their lives. The Canton Benevolent Society has sent men to look after the hodies and arrange for their interment. In order to facilitate identification of the deceased, photographs
